

April 3, 2020

Ropes & Gray Launches Data-Focused Blog, RopesDataPhiles

The ongoing COVID-19 outbreak continues to cause both business and personal disruptions around the globe. The many questions that have arisen include those surrounding the collection, disclosure and sharing of data regarding the virus. In this uniquely challenging time, Ropes & Gray recognizes that it is of the utmost importance that we stay connected with our clients and at the forefront of their ever-evolving concerns.

As we navigate this unprecedented period, our Data, Privacy & Cybersecurity group is pleased to announce the launch of our blog, RopesDataPhiles at www.RopesDataPhiles.com. The blog will allow us to keep our clients updated in a timely manner on privacy, data, and cybersecurity developments. Our insights will cover topics related to COVID-19, such as the proper handling of employee health data, guidance from regulators on the use of COVID-related data, and the impact of the virus on compliance with privacy and security laws. The blog will also house thought leadership pieces related to more general data, privacy and cybersecurity topics, including the California Consumer Protection Act (“CCPA”), the General Data Protection Regulation (“GDPR”), the U.K.’s Data Protection Act, and U.S. state privacy laws.

For more information on Ropes & Gray’s Data, Privacy & Cybersecurity Group, please visit our website. Please visit Ropes & Gray’s Coronavirus Resource Center for the latest updates on legal developments in connection to the outbreak of COVID-19.